Rev. Crowl's Opinion of Landlordism-The Monarchy Doomed to Fall.

In the Presbyterian Banner of October 6 appears a caustic letter from the pen of Rev. Theodore Crowl, written from London during his visit abroad. It is produced almost in full below:

It has been in my mind for some side of the Atlantic, but I have waited to see how some of my first impressions would be effected by further observation and inquiry, for I not be said rashly. And first I have is reserved for Lord Bantry and his have some things to say which should some things to say about

From Cork we went by Glengariffe, where we spent a quiet Sabbath amidst the finest scenery of which Ireland can boast. From Glengariffe we traveled by coach through quickly alternating sunshine and showers to Killarney; saw the charming old ruins of Muscross Abbey, and heard the Irish boatmen as they rowed us to Ross Castle, the by Cromwell's guns and never have been restored. We landed on the Island of Innisfallen and recalled ernment Thomas Moore's lines:

"Sweet Innisfation, long shall dwell In memory's dream, that sunny smile, Which o'er thee on that evening fell,

When first I saw thy fairy isle." From Killarney we went to Dublin, drove through Phænix Park and saw the spot marked with a cross of white pebbles in the cement pavement where Cavendish and Burke were assassinated. We arrived in Belfast the evening after the first of the series of riots which have disgraced that city and perplexed the

What shall I say of Ireland? There is a great deal of sensitiveness on the subject of Ireland here in England. I think there is a general, though confessed feeling, that Ireland has suffered great injustice, and probably an American who has no relatives whom he knows of who belong either to the class of castled landlords or mutinous tenants can judge as well as any one else of the state of Ireland. It cannot be denied that Ireland is in a pitiable condition. Such prevailing poverty as there is in the southwest part of Ireland I never have seen in any other country. The soil is poor to begin with. The country is rough. Stony hills and rocky mountain sides and peat bogs abound. In the United States we would think that about all a family could do would be barely to make a living on 100
